Profile

As an emerging artist and young part-time visual arts teacher, I find myself irresistibly drawn to a world of meticulous observational artistic practices.

Although I may lack the patience and skills of a rigorously trained oil painter, my artistic practice centres around capturing the beauty of minutiae—the little things that often go unnoticed.

As a result, viewers are left with a recurring “overcomplicated” theme and visual experience as I attempt to collude a multitude of disciplines and contexts to challenge an overlapping plethora of generic yet, sometimes personal, themes.
